

IN THE SPECIFICATION:

Please REPLACE the paragraph beginning at page 1, line 8, with the following paragraph:

A1

The present invention generally relates to methods of producing printed matter such as newspapers and magazines. More particularly, the present invention relates to a method of producing printed matter containing direct-reading materials including ~~test~~ text and pictures, and related materials including text, sound, and images, using an information processing apparatus. Furthermore, the present invention relates to a method of producing printed matter containing the points of materials to which space on a newspaper or a magazine are not allocated, and positional information of an area in which the non-allocated materials are stored in advance.
